We did not have 100% confidence on the near term direction (up or down on a 1 or 5 minute chart) of the market after yesterday's late day decline so we were content to sit on our TVIX for the long term move down and our call options that expire Monday for the possible short term move up. Meanwhile at the open we tweeted out the Fibonacci correction levels in case the market continued down today.

The correction from the 3/20 high appears to be an a, b, c, down, up, down correction where wave c = .618 of wave a and complete at today's open lower.

In the near term (1 and 5 minute charts) from the 3/20 low wave v will gain equality with wave i at 2875. Support for any moves to the downside is at the wave iii high of 2851.

Fibonacci Options Day Trader Report:

We sold all four of our March 25th 2850 calls today at 13.10, 13.60, 14.70 and 15.10. We had bought them two days ago at 11 and 13.60. These options again are like found money because they were going to zero (low was 1.95 today) as the market gapped down at the open. Our entry position was not the best (bought a little early), but our direction (in this case up) was correct. We are happy to sell at a profit ($692.08) today.
